Underwriters Laboratories Inc is an independent, not-for-profit product safety and certification organization, which, since its founding in 1894, has held the undisputed reputation as the leader in U.S. product safety certification.

In order to obtain approval to apply the UL mark, Warmup heaters and components were subjected to exhaustive testing at laboratories in New York and Chicago, and our factory in Johannesburg is inspected by a UL representative every three months.

The UL mark is not strictly applicable in South Africa because of product detail changes to suit local conditions, but the same top-quality components, precise manufacturing techniques and exacting quality standards are applied to every product made by Warmup.

When Warmup's approval was granted in September 2003, it was the first approval granted by UL to any company worldwide for a heating panel designed for installation directly under carpet and similar combustible floor covering.
